

Education Jobs and Teacher Jobs

By Harrison Barnes

The field of education—including elementary schools, high schools, colleges, and universities—is a very exciting place to look for a job because of the tremendous number of jobs available. I'm excited to show you how to approach this sector. I think it will open up some doors in terms of how you think about looking for a job.

Jobs in education tend to be scattered across an incredible number of sources. Many of these sources are university and school system websites. Because of this, it's much easier to track down and apply for jobs at these institutions. You also have a better chance of actually getting these positions compared to those that are more widely advertised.

2. List of State Departments of Education
3. List of Territory Departments of Education
4. Colleges and Universities
5. Jobs in K–12
6. Conclusions

In order to explore this thoroughly, let's start broad with the federal government and work our way down to state governments, universities, and finally, local school systems. Education jobs encompass not just teaching positions, but also those inside educational institutions. I'll cover each below.

Education Jobs with the Federal and State Government

The US Department of Education has its own website, which lists numerous jobs. It's basically like a regular job search engine. On this site, you'll see vacancies in almost every field, including finance jobs, attorney jobs, and many others. This is the site:

<http://jobsearch.edhires.ed.gov/>

The screenshot shows the ED.gov website's job search interface. At the top, there's a navigation bar with the ED.gov logo, the text "U.S. Department of Education Promoting educational excellence for all Americans.", and two dropdown menus labeled "Information For" and "Information About", each with a "GO" button. Below this is a "Basic Search" tab. The main search area has a "Keyword Search" section with a text input field and a "More Tips" link. Below that is an "Agency Search" section with instructions and a list of agencies: "EDUCATION, DEPARTMENT OF", "Federal Student Aid", "Office for Civil Rights", "Office of Elementary and Secondary Education", "Office of Management", "Office of Special Education and Rehabilitative", and "Office of the Chief Financial Officer". At the bottom is a "Location Search" section with instructions and a list of locations: "US".

This particular site isn't overflowing with opportunities, but it's always good to check just for the sake of being thorough.

From the federal government, we move to the state government. Here is a list of the state departments of education, which all have several jobs available at any one time.

Colleges and Universities

Colleges and universities are where the search starts to get exciting. To review, the strategy we're following here is simply to go to the website and look at the jobs available.

Identify all of the colleges and universities in the area of the country in which you want to work. The best way of doing this is to use the following Wikipedia list. Wikipedia has the best lists so let's review this one here quickly.

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/List\_of\_universities\_and\_colleges\_by\_country

If you go to this link, you'll see they have a list of universities and colleges by country. If you have some special sort of skill, you can apply to places in other countries if you teach something very specific and have a shot of getting a job there. Teachers job opportunities are everywhere.

List of universities and colleges by country

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

This is a list of lists of universities and colleges by country, representing educational institutions throughout the world which p education in tertiary, quaternary and post-secondary education.

Universities and Colleges institutions are:

Africa

Eastern Africa

- Burundi
- Comoros
- Djibouti
- Eritrea
- Ethiopia
- Kenya
- Madagascar
- Malawi
- Mauritius
- Mozambique
- Rwanda

For example, I lived in Bangkok, Thailand, when I was a teenager. I went to high school there for a year and there were tons of American teachers there. You can go to work in international schools and could be the "Teacher Jon" (or Jane) that the school needs. If you're interested in teacher jobs, there are numerous places you can teach all over the world. Teacher job vacancies have no geographic boundaries.

Let's look at California. You have a huge list of all of the different colleges. You can see also the California Community College Systems, which we'll talk about in a minute.

State institutions

Two-year institutions

- See California Community Colleges System

Four-year institutions

- California State University
  - California Maritime Academy, (Vallejo)
  - California Polytechnic State University, (San Luis Obispo)
  - California State Polytechnic University, Pomona, (Pomona)
  - California State University, Bakersfield, (Bakersfield)
  - California State University, Channel Islands, (Camarillo)
  - California State University, Chico, (Chico)
  - California State University, Dominguez Hills, (Carson)
  - California State University, East Bay, (Hayward)
  - California State University, Fresno, (Fresno)
  - California State University, Fullerton, (Fullerton)
  - California State University, Long Beach, (Long Beach)
  - California State University, Los Angeles, (Los Angeles)
  - California State University, Monterey Bay, (Seaside)
  - California State University, Northridge, (Northridge)

Basically, you've got this list of private colleges and they are all different places you could work organized by country. They have rankings and subjects of study. I really like Wikipedia. They can show you all the different law schools if you're an attorney, chiropractic schools if you're a chiropractor, and so on. It's amazing what kind of resources you can find here.

Private colleges and universities

- Academy of Art University, San Francisco
- Allied American University, Laguna Hills (Online)
- American Heritage University of Southern California, San Bernardino, California
- American Jewish University, Los Angeles
- American Sports University, San Bernardino
- Anaheim University, Anaheim (Online)
- Antioch University, Culver City
- Apollos University, Huntington Beach (Online)
- Argosy University, Alameda
- Art Center College of Design, Pasadena
- The Art Institute of California - San Francisco, San Francisco
- Azusa Pacific University, Azusa
- Bethany University, Scotts Valley
- Biola University, La Mirada
- Brooks Institute, Santa Barbara
- California Baptist University, Riverside
- California Coast University, Santa Ana
- California College of the Arts, San Francisco

After browsing through these lists, find the colleges and universities you're interested in then go to their websites. Just so you can get an understanding of how it works, this is UCLA. Assume for a moment you're interested in working there. You'd first go to the UCLA website. You can see they have different schools there.

The UCLA website, for example, has a tab called "employment."

In addition to campus jobs, you can find more UCLA employment opportunities at the hospital, the medical school, for recruitment, for fund-raising, and more. It's just awesome how many jobs you can find when you start looking at what each school offers.

It's important to keep in mind that a lot of these jobs won't be advertised on the school's website. You have to dig in and look at all of these as closely as you can. To do this, go to Wikipedia.

Another thing I recommend is performing Google searches for colleges or universities in the county where you live. For example, let's do a quick search. Type in "Los Angeles County universities" or "Colleges and universities in Los Angeles County." Look at this. It's absolutely insane:

Search results for "los angeles county universities" (About 642,000,000 results (0.23 seconds))

There are other lists you can use to find these schools. Most states have lists on their Department of Education websites. For example, look at Arizona's site: AZED.gov.

I also recommend looking into unaccredited schools. It's fascinating. This is a good list of unaccredited institutions of higher learning:

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/List\_of\_unaccredited\_institutions\_of\_higher\_education

It's still under construction, but I would keep checking back to see updates. It will obviously continue to improve over time.

Unaccredited schools could become accredited at any time, so it's worth keeping an eye on.

Then, of course, there are always the U.S. News and World Report rankings located at: <http://www.usnews.com/rankings>.

There are colleges and universities all over. There may even be some in your own town that you don't know about. What's funny, especially in California where I'm located is there are a lot of unaccredited schools.

I remember several years ago, probably closer to ten years ago, I was sitting in an office building and talking to someone on the phone. He said to me that he was a student in this particular law school. I asked what law school and he said the name. I literally had never heard of it. It was in an office building that was a stone's throw from where I was working. I had never heard of the law school. Be on the lookout for both unaccredited and accredited schools and know that there are schools all over that you may not know about.

In addition to looking for colleges and universities, you should look for trade schools. They have jobs for accountants, attorneys, architects, and pretty much any profession you can think of. To the extent you want to be very proactive in your job search, you need to look at pretty much every list of trade schools you possibly can. Chances are, several trade schools are located nearby.

This is a vocational school database: <http://www.usnews.com/rankings>.

RWM provides a database of Private Postsecondary Vocational Schools in all 50 states. It is organized first by state, then by Training Occupation.

Included are private schools that offer certificates, diplomas, associate (junior college) degrees, and bachelor (college) degrees in various Business, Trade and Technical disciplines.

The RWM Vocational School database includes online schools, including information on getting a high school diploma online from an accredited online high school.

Training for an in-demand career is an investment in your economic future. Whether you want to work in the electronics and HVAC industry, or in an automotive, healthcare, paralegal or IT technology position, you'll find the courses and programs here that let you achieve your goals. Get the certification that tells potential employers they can hire you with confidence.

A lot of this database is online and I haven't found a good list that is public. I want to warn you that these tend to be lead generation sites. You can see there are places here that are advertised.

The for-profit education system is huge. As a matter of fact, the founder of the University of Phoenix is a billionaire, one of the richest men in the United States. I just want you to understand that when you're looking at these lists, you need to be careful. None of these lists are complete. In some cases, people have to pay to be on these lists.

Trade schools may or may not advertise in different places online, but you should use these lists to the fullest extent possible. I'm cognizant of the fact that if you're looking for a job, simply as a teacher, professor, or something, that you're going to go to this site and look for other colleges and universities. Use these lists and even look at trade schools. There is a lot of available work depending on the geographic areas you choose.

Jobs in K-12

Finally, let's consider lower level education. Now, many people look at private schools to find K-12 jobs. Again, there are lots of good lists for that. I am going to give you some links for private schools. Let's look at a couple of them quickly.

Check out this list for accredited schools from all over the country: <http://www.privateschoolreview.com/>. This is a good searchable list.
